

SUMMARY HYDROXYCHLOROQUINE

- Australian and State governments banning this medication in March 2020, when it was previously available for doctors to prescribe has been done so in the absence of any relevant or independent studies on the treating of covid19.
- In Uganda where the population is over 42 million, there have been less than 90 Covid19 related deaths. Ugandans use Hydroxychloroquine as regular medication for malaria which is readily available for Ugandan doctors to prescribe.
- The doctor -patient relationship in Australia has therefore been interfered with by government, health officials and policy makers.
- The government narrative supported by main stream media seems to be that it only supports vaccines as effective treatment, before we are allowed to get back to normal living. Vaccines cannot be mandated if there are alternative effective treatments. But how can we know if they are banned?
- If Hydroxychloroquine has been banned in knowledge that it is an effective cure for Covid19, those responsible are open to serious legal liability.
- The Australian Medical Association's reputation is at risk. Doctor's oaths are to "do no harm" but if their real medical opinion is overridden by government policy which does not have proper medical backing, then doctors cannot uphold their oath. "It is astonishing the extent to which the theoretical scientists and health bureaucrats remain in denial about the health damage of their policies and in violation of the Hippocratic Oath."- Emeritus Professor at the Australian National University Ramesh Thakur
